The Accidental Locavore Wants to Live in France. Would You?

Is there a place you've always wanted to live, where you've felt totally at home in? For the Accidental Locavore, that place is France, specifically the Cote d'Azur, and to be really specific, Nice, Vence or Antibes. From the moment the plane touches down at the airport, I'm in my happy place. Between the amazing stretch of the Mediterranean, the perfect yellow of the buildings in the old city and the azure skies, it's impossible not to have a smile on your face! And the food is pretty good too, don't you think?

Do You Dare Switch-Up Breakfast? Trying Local Teas

When was the last time you (willingly) changed-up what you drank in the morning? And how much did you change it up? The Accidental Locavore was pondering this, switching blends of tea not once, but three times this week. Which got me to thinking, do you eat and drink the same thing every morning? Go for more variety on the weekends? I'm pretty much tied to a big mug of tea and a bowl of yogurt with granola and berries during the week, and an omelet on the weekends (lovingly cooked by my husband).
