Accidental Locavore: Croissants and Coffee, a Perfect Pairing

Like the Accidental Locavore, you would think that in a place like France, finding a simple breakfast -- a good croissant and an equally fine cup of coffee -- would be a no-brainer, however that's not necessarily the case. Since we've been renting apartments the past two times we've been in Nice, our quest each spring has been to find the neighborhood café with the penultimate combination of croissant and coffee (bonus points added for locale and pleasant staff). This has been harder than you might imagine.

The Accidental Locavore at Le Victor Hugo: a Very Good Good Friday!

The Accidental Locavore thinks that sometimes the old saying "no good deed goes unpunished" doesn't hold true in France. Many of our most memorable meals come when my husband and I have been exploring places one of us has little or no interest in (all the F1 racetracks in France) and afterwards, as a reward we always seem to find an amazing meal.
