In Honor of Julia Child's 100th Birthday...Hamburgers?

Quick now, name the best French meatballs you ever had.

The Accidental Locavore was thinking about the 100th anniversary of Julia Child's birthday and wondering what could be made with hamburger (since that was what was for dinner) that would be French. Other than steak tartare or bifteck haché (hamburger without the bun to you or me) not a whole lot comes to mind.

Peach Crisp With a Twist

Since the Accidental Locavore was on a bit of a peach binge lately, it seemed like the perfect time to make this great version of a peach crisp. The twist? Using gingersnaps for the crumble. It adds a nice bit of spice. This is really easy to do (once you've peeled the peaches) and will serve 4-6 depending on what's gone before. This is from Food & Wine.
