The Accidental Locavore Tosses Pizza: the Secret of a Moe's Classico

The Accidental Locavore's father was making fun of the crust on the pizza bianco with ramps, reminding me that it was clear I had missed the pizza tossing class with our friend Moe. Moe is famous at Madison's Pizza not only for his tossing skills, but more importantly (for the Locavore anyway) for his "Moe's Classico" a thin crust pizza with four cheeses, fresh tomato sauce, garlic and basil -- a delicious combination.

What the Accidental Locavore Does With Arugula, Peas, Broccoli and More

This week's farm box was packed full of great stuff! There were radishes, turnips (both with their greens), green and yellow beans, peas, arugula, mesclun, perfect tiny heads of broccoli, small bunches of dill, rosemary, thyme and sage and the last of the season's strawberries. Read more:

So what to do with all this bounty? First, an arugula pesto made with some of last week's wild arugula, tossed over homemade fettuccine. Then added: sautéed peas and broccoli with strips of prosciutto and topped all of it with Parmesan. Delicious!

Recipes From the Farmers' Market

To go with my weekly farm box, I'm writing recipes for my farmer, Paul, to hand out at the farmers' market in Millbrook. Now, they're archived on the website. This week it's all about turnips and their greens.
