Can Spa Food Be Delicious? Absolutely!

This week, the Accidental Locavore has a great guest blogger. If you've ever wondered why these blogs are (relatively) mistake-proof, it's because of my good friend, editor and this week, guest blogger, Lisa. She and her good friend Ellen were at Miraval spa for a few days and wanted to share their food experiences there. I'm sure there were some exercise classes and an occasional massage tossed in too...or maybe they just ate for three days.

Accidental Locavore Shops New York Mouth: Local Artisanal Products

Don't you often wonder how you discover certain things? The Accidental Locavore has no idea where she heard of New York Mouth, however, it's a great site, devoted to artisanal, small-batch and generally local purveyors.

For a project, the Locavore has been exploring food-related websites – comparing them for gastro-porn (how tempting the photography is), amusing copy, interesting product mixes and ease of ordering and, when the boxes arrive, how well the packages promote the brand and how the food is wrapped.
