Dear Friend,

All about food this week. First up, a new Mexican restaurant in Red Hook, NY and then a recipe for chocolate and cheesecake brownies.

Adventures in Nice coming up soon. So far, just eaten a lot of cheese. If you know anyone or anywhere I should check out while I'm there, please let me know!

Modern Taco

Always on the prowl for good Mexican food, the Accidental Locavore was quick to pick up on the rumors that there was a good new one, Modern Taco, in nearby Red Hook (Rhinebeck's shy sister). An added bonus was that we knew the chef/owner Mark Brocchetti, the chef from our golf course dining room, back when the food was enjoyable, interesting and made by someone who cared. Chocolate and Cheesecake Brownies

Usually the Accidental Locavore likes chocolate straight up – with no additions of coffee or chipotle or whatever getting in the way of pure chocolate happiness. However, when I saw this recipe from David Lebovitz (and happened to have all the ingredients) and needed to bring brownies to dinner with friends, it was time to break out of my pure chocolate comfort zone.
