Dear Friend,

Need a super-simple dessert? Just look below. What happens when a chef leaves a favorite restaurant?

Why don't you invite your friends to sign up for the newsletter? My goal is to double the readership, so if everyone reading this can get a friend to sign up...Or you can click the icons above the logo to send to a friend, Twitter, Facebook, or LinkedIn.

Enjoy!

Stepping Away and Saying Goodbye

What happens when a chef steps away from the stove? In the case of a couple of the Accidental Locavore's old favorite restaurants, it may be time to say adieu. Long ago, it was the death of chef Antoine Magnin of L'Ami Louis in Paris that took it from being where I would, without doubt, choose my last meal from, to just being an extraordinarily expensive roast chicken (and where I have had my last meal from).

Cooking for Show: The Easiest Fruit Tarts

Men...! Close to the last minute, the Accidental Locavore's husband said we were expected to bring dessert for thirty-six to a Saturday party. I can generally whip up respectable desserts for dinner guests, but in no way do desserts count as one of my strengths as a cook. So, what to make?
