

Accidentallocavore®

Dear Friend,

Sticking with the kitchen gadget category, I play with a new set of measuring spoons. See what makes them unique. Then, in a seasonal mode, a delicious recipe for butternut squash!

As always, I'd love it if you could spread the word and get your friends to sign up! Or you can click the icons above or below to send to a friend, share on Twitter, Facebook, or LinkedIn.

Enjoy!

Measurements and Kitchen Gadgets

As part of my latest box from Mary's Secret Ingredients, there was a set of measuring spoons that the Accidental Locavore initially just laughed at. I've been using a set of Tupperware spoons since I got them and they worked fine (come on, what does a measuring spoon have to do but measure stuff?), were a good color and clipped together easily so they were easy to find in the drawer. So when I saw this mess of spoons from POURfect and a strange stick that was attached, I was a little resistant. Read more:

Butternut Squash With a Pair of Sauces

Although the Accidental Locavore generally needs to be talked into the autumnal pumpkin/winter squash frenzy kicking and complaining (but not screaming), we were given a beautiful butternut squash from a friend's garden, so I went cruising for something interesting to do with it and found this great recipe from Ottolenghi's Plenty More. It's really simple and, depending on the size of your squash, feeds at least 4 as a side dish. Get the recipe:

Raw Milk Cheese

The FDA is looking into outlawing all raw milk cheeses. If you care about this (and you should), Cellars at Jasper Hill have an interesting article and a survey you can take to help influence the FDA. Click here for the article and please forward!
